

STAT

ARTICLE APPEARED
ON PAGE 1CHICAGO TRIBUNE
7 July 1980

Russ told: Beware of foreign lies

MOSCOW [UPI]—Less than two weeks before the opening of the Olympics in Moscow, Soviet television broadcast a documentary Sunday warning Soviet citizens of ideological subversion by foreign visitors.

The broadcast, entitled "Lies and Hatred," was the latest evidence of official concern about the influx of thousands of tourists for the Olympics, which begin July 19.

Viktor Grishin, a Politburo member and head of Moscow's Communist Party organization, warned months ago against ideological contamination from foreigners.

The broadcast Sunday renewed a number of old charges, including the labeling of two former Moscow correspondents for American news organizations as Central Intelligence Agency agents. But the timing left little doubt as to the in-intended impact.

THE PROGRAM charged that a Russian emigre organization had met with the CIA in January and was directed to "go to Moscow under the guise of friends."

It said the organization has prepared instructions for anti-Soviet activity by tourists attending the Olympic Games, including ways to conceal and distribute contraband documents.

The film showed tourists arriving by bus, apparently from Finland. Several tourists were photographed with anti-Soviet pamphlets strapped to their waist beneath their clothing or concealed in their luggage.

The program also said specially recruited Russian-speaking students were being trained at a camp in England to slip into the country to spread anti-Soviet material.

IT SAID THESE "ideological subversives" were trained to smoothly deflect questions from Soviet citizens and turn them into anti-Soviet statements.

The film was particularly harsh against what it said were Zionist groups trying to spread anti-Soviet material, mainly through Ukrainian nationalists.